WALT WHITMAN'S NEW POEM.

O Captain! my Captain! our fearful trip is done;
The ship has weathered every rack, the prize we sought is won;
The port is near, the bells I hear, the people all exulting,
While follow eyes the steady keel, the vessel grim and daring.
But, O heart! heart! heart!
O the bleeding drops of red,
Where on the deck my Captain lies,
Fallen cold and dead.

O Captain! my Captain! rise up and hear the bells;
Rise up—for you the flag is flung—for you the bugle trills;
For you bouquets and ribbon'd wreaths—for you the shores a-crowding:
For you they call, the swaying mass, their eager faces turning.
Here, Captain! dear father!
This arm beneath your head!
It is some dream that on the deck
You're fallen cold and dead.

My Captain does not answer, his lips are pale and still;
My father does not feel my arm, he has no pulse nor will;
The ship is anchored safe and sound, its voyage closed and done;
From fearful trip the victor ship comes in with object won.
Exult, O shores, and ring, O bells!
But I with mournful tread
Walk the deck—my Captain lies
Fallen cold and dead.

BUSINESS OPENINGS IN MEXICO.

Who Do and Who Do Not Make Money—Ventures for Americans.

Many young men write here (Mexico), asking if there is an opening for them. Some desire clerkships and others have a small capital which they wish to invest in lands.

It is not advisable for young men to come here in quest of a clerkship, especially if unacquainted with the Spanish language. Clerkships here, unless secured beforehand in some strongly established house or in a corporation, are not satisfactory.

A young fellow coming here should have some good prospect of a steady rise in position, else he had better stay at home. Without the language he will be of little use to himself or any one else. A young Bostonian who came here a short time ago remarked in unconcealed astonishment:

"Why, everybody speaks Spanish here, you know."

If a Mexican had said to him in Boston that everybody spoke English, he would have set that Mexican down as an idiot.

For men with small capital for investment in lands Mexico is not the country. For some time to come syndicates and large capitalists will continue to purchase big tracts, and agriculture will be carried on in that way. Not until some time will small tracts be available.

There is a field here always for men with useful specialties. First-class mechanics who can afford a trip here to look over the ground might well come, and people with odd knacks which are worth money.

For example, a young Portuguese came here recently on a venture. His only art was a rare ability to paint on silk. This seemed a mighty poor capital to invest here, but he got an introduction into wealthy families, and has now a good income from teaching the senoritas his novel and beautiful art. The Mexicans love decoration and the decorative arts.

Some young people are doing well here as tutors of English in rich families, for English is a fashionable rage, and the senoritas like to be able to say a few charming things in the language of Shakespeare.

It is quite the elegant thing to be able to say "good by" and "how do you do?" in English, and the zeal with which some young Mexican ladies pursue English is worthy of the Boston girls' craze on German.

Cafe keeping here is profitable; and, as we have an American barber shop and American bar-rooms, it seems quite feasible to make money out of an American cafe, where one could get buckwheat cakes, pumpkin pie (good pumpkins grow here), fish-balls, and other Yankee dishes.

An elderly Englishman here has made money out of a regular Johnny Bull eating house, where one can get roast beef and plum pudding, and ale ad lib.

The French have their cafe, with their own cooking, but the American tourist finds little that is familiar to him here. A genuine American restaurant, run by a live and energetic man, would pay well.

The growing taste for American light carriages suggests the idea that an American livery stable would be a profitable venture. Rent need not be high and labor would be very cheap, and I think that the youth of Mexico would patronize liberally a good stable where fine teams for display on the Paseo could be had.

There are not many good carriage roads here, but there is an opportunity to rent out phætons, buggies, etc. It would be a decided novelty here.

And why not a livery stable as well as the present roller skating rink, where the jeunesse doree of Mexico go to bark their shins and crack their crowns. The despised roller skating rink is succeeding here, and down in Vera Cruz they regard their rink as a most delightfully fashionable place of entertainment.

Another American novelty which is paying handsomely here is the circus, permanently established near where the inquisition used to bother people with little iron arrangements for extracting information.—[Boston Herald.

The Progress of Enlightenment.

As in the old Greek games the athletes ran with torches, and one handed the light to the other, and thus it passed along the line, so it is with us, each man runneth his race, but he passeth the torch on to another, that the light may never go out from generation to generation.—[Spurgeon.

Fellow-Feeling.

Twelve lawyers stood at the windows in the circuit court room this morning watching a sparrow hawk plucking the feathers from a sparrow which he had captured for his breakfast.

The scene was very interesting to the attorneys.—[Warsaw (Va.) Herald.

THE OSWEGATCHIE TOAD-HUNTER.

How The General Rescued His Onion Patch From Grubs.

They tell a good story of the dainty reformer, Newton Martin Curtis, up in St. Lawrence County, New York, where he has always lived.

Curtis made an excellent record as a soldier during the war, and as everybody who knows him knows, had an eye shot out at Fort Fisher, where he was the first man into the Confederate works.

After the war he returned to the wild fastnesses of St. Lawrence County and started on a new career which paralyzed his neighbors. He began to show his experienced and expert farmer neighbors how to farm.

It is true that up to that time he could not distinguish the difference between a harrow and a furrow, but his war experience had made him a great man, and his rank of major-general by brevet had placed him in a position where to receive advice would be not only ridiculous but positively mortifying.

He bought a farm of some hundred acres and ploughed into it on his own hook and in his own way. One season he raised nothing but corn, another nothing but wheat. Then came a year when there was an onion famine.

Here was the General's opportunity. He turned his farm of several hundred acres into one enormous onion patch. Some of his neighbors shook their heads. Others expostulated with him. Many tried to advise him to change his plan.

"The weeds will ruin you and the grubs destroy the crops," they said.

In vain. The obdurate hero of Fort Fisher knew it all. Had he come from the command of thousands of men to be told his business by illiterate and obscure St. Lawrence County farmers?

The onions began to sprout. So did the weeds. The General took off his coat and energetically began on the weeds a crusade of extermination.

It was then that he made a fresh discovery. Grubs nearly a half a foot in length, in myriads, were chewing up his precious food. Discouraged? Not he! He merely scratched his head and pondered. He gazed reflectively at his neighbors' fields laughing with plenty. He ransacked his library for an antidote for grubs.

If the question had been one of flanking a victorious army or of charging an enemy's works, he would not have hesitated for a moment what was the proper and most decisive thing to do, but as it was the momentous issue of grubs he was utterly at sea, and in the end had to give it up.

Finally a neighbor came to his relief—a sympathetic and kind hearted neighbor who knew nothing of war but a great deal about farms.

"The only way to kill them 'ere grubs," he said, "is to give 'em toads." So the General advertised for toads at ten cents a dozen delivered on his farm.

"Plagues of Egypt!" he cried, when he saw a procession a quarter of a mile long marching up to his place with from a dozen to ten dozen toads.

Every day, regular as the sun arose, the procession appeared, received its ten cents a dozen for the batrachians and left, and no doubt would have continued till the present time had not the General made the shocking discovery that while the toads were delivered in the morning, they were covertly collected at night and resold to him the following morning. Hence his name—the "toad-hunter of the Oswegatchie, or the disappointed farmer."—[N. Y. World.

A Cross-Eyed Man in Luck.

Yesterday morning at the Columbia Theatre nearly one hundred people were in line waiting single tickets to the Mapleson opera.

Just as Louis Kalish was about to open his window and fling out his first pasteboard, a jet black kitten bounced into the theatre from Mr. Hogg's clove gallery, and began to claw the carpet. Ed. Taylor's face beamed with delight, and he rushed to tell Kalish to open the window and begin the sale at once.

Then the active and keen observer went out, and, accosting the cross-eyed man, he said Mr. McConnell wanted to see him inside.

Wonderingly the cross-eyed man left his place in line, went into the private office, was presented to Mr. McConnell, and given two complimentaries for the performance that he wanted to see.

"That is all right," said Mr. Taylor to the man with the swivel eye. "You could not have bought any seats there, for you would have 'hoodooed' the whole engagement. We just had a black cat come in, and you had to go out. Now, there, no remarks—please go, sir; please go. We would much rather give you two seats than sell them to you on the opening day of the sale."

The swivel-eyed man walked off, wondering what it all meant, and if the Columbia theatre had been made a branch of the Kankakee asylum.

"Of course," said Mr. Taylor afterward, "a cross-eyed man in the line ruins everything. You see, the advent of that black cat was a great thing, and we couldn't have it ruined by a man with a bad eye."

Then Mr. Kalish opened his window.—[Chicago Herald.

Her First View of Death.

The touching pathos of childhood is shown in the following.

The death of a well known gentleman had called forth many expressions of sympathy from friends in the way of a profusion of flowers in beautiful designs.

After they had been placed around him as he lay in the casket, his little daughter Alice, of four years, was led by her mamma into the room to look upon the face of her dead papa.

She was naturally attracted by the flowers and by the design of "The Gates Ajar." Her mamma told her that "the beautiful gate" had opened and papa had passed through and would never come back to them again.

The child looked steadily at her papa's face for a few moments, then climbed up so she could reach over and kiss his cold lips, saying:

"Papa, dear, speak to me and say you will come to 'the beautiful gate' and meet your little Alice some day."

AN OLD YANKEE NEWSPAPER.

Its Quaint Contents—The Invention of the Stocking Loom.

A copy of the New England Weekly Journal, of April 8, 1728, one hundred and fifty-eight years ago, which lies before me, contains so many curious things that I cannot forbear making a few quotations with all their quaintness of rhetoric and profuseness of capitals.

The editor explains his plans as follows:

"There are Measures for rendering this Paper yet more universally esteemed, and useful, in which 'tis hop'd the Publick will be gratifi'd, and by which those gentlemen who desire to be improv'd in History, Philosophy, Poetry, &c., will be greatly advantaged."

Then follows a history of the invention of the stocking loom with this editorial preface:

"'Tis not the understanding or poring upon Books that makes a man wise or serviceable, but the knowing the True Nature of Things. Were Practice substituted in the room of Speculation, the good Effects of Knowledge would become as visible as they are excellent. An instance of the Truth in which is illustrated in the following Relation."

A few other paragraphs are well worth reading:

"It is not out of some Men's Remembrance, that a young Gentleman, of no Fortune, a Student of Oxford, fell in Love with an Inn Keeper's Daughter of that Town, whose Circumstances were very narrow; he had Philosophy enough to despise superfluous Wealth and Judgment to foresee the Necessity of a Competency to Live; but Love was headstrong, and too hard for reason, so that after a Year or two's ineffectual Delay, they bid Defiance to their Stars and had Courage enough to marry. The Scholar gain'd a wife, and lost a Fellowship, the only small Subsistence he before depended on."

Then the story relates the inability of the unlettered innkeeper to understand why his learned son-in-law could not earn a penny toward his own support and that of his wife.

After the innkeeper's death, which occurred in less than a year, the unfortunate couple were compelled to leave the inn and take refuge in the garret of the house of a relative of the wife.

The wife endeavored to gain a subsistence by knitting stockings "at a certain poor Price for every Pair." The husband could only "waste his Hours between Books and Sighs," but as a means of recreation probably he often gazed with admiration upon the dextrous movements of his wife's fingers.

This rapt attention to the motion of hands and needles led him to think of a loom that would do the work more expeditiously.

Telling his wife of his idea, he "joined Head to her Hands, and the ingenious Stocking Loom was first invented, by which he did not only make himself and his Family happy, but has left his Nation indebted to him for a Benefit which enables them to export Silk Stockings in great Quantities and to a vast Advantage to those very Countries from whence before they us'd to bring them at considerable Loss in the Balance of their Traffick."

Bismarck's Noble Wife.

The Chancellor's wife, a tall, aristocratic-looking woman, with decided but pleasing features, and in an elegant though simple toilet, received each guest as he arrived with gracious affability.

Standing close beside the open portieres, past which the eye glanced into the family living rooms, she was a true type of the position she holds both in home and public life.

A noble wife and mother, she has faithfully stood by her husband's side from the very commencement of his political career.

A Chicago paper declares that Bismarck's wife is her husband's private secretary! How far this statement is true we do not pretend to say, but an old friend of the family has repeatedly told us that during the saddest time that Germany has witnessed for the past fifty years, when Bismarck, disheartened and dispirited, retired to his small property of Schonhausen there to vegetate as a small Prussian landowner, while brooding moodily over all his grand political schemes, his wife never for a moment lost heart, but was able to inspire her husband with ever fresh courage and hope.

The Capitolian Applewoman.

When Dom Pedro [illegible] Brazil was here he went through the Capitol, and in passing by Aunt Clara's booth she created a tremendous sensation by rushing out and throwing her arms about his neck and kissing him.

Then she cried in a voice loud enough to be heard from House to Senate: "I've kissed a king! I've kissed a king!"

Of course, the Emperor was greatly astonished at this procedure, but it was explained that she had a weak mind, and he then evinced a curiosity in her wares displayed at the booth.

He gave her a lot of his photographs to sell and wrote his autograph in her book kept only for the signatures of great men.

Aunt Clara Morris was shrewd, for she made copies of the autograph on tracing paper and sold them at a good price.

She is always greatly affected at learning the death of one of her distinguished friends and often closes her booth out of respect to their memories. She was a strong friend of General Grant, and it is said one of his last letters was to Aunt Clara, thanking her for a letter in which she said she was praying for his recovery. She is desperately in love with Ben Butler and says she loves him more than any man since Charles Sumner.—[Baltimore American.

The Unlucky Number.

A little squad of printers in New Haven were photographed some months ago, and since then some one of them has been sick constantly.

The incessant illness led some of the party to attribute it to the picture, which it was found contained just 13 figures.

As soon as it became known that the party contained that fateful number the increase of illness was marked, and to-day four or five of the party are off while the remainder are going about kicking themselves and shaking with fear over what may happen.—[New Haven Register.

THE ART OF WHISTLING.

Uses and Abuses of the Musical Pucker.

Whistling is the safety-vent of persons without a singing voice, but with a musical tendency.

In the mouth of the right person whistling may become an art and prove a blessing, but there is nothing more lugubrious than a poor whistler who persists in splitting the air crosswise with tortured chromatics.

Persons of sedentary habits, or those whose occupations take them apart from mankind in general, are often given to whistling.

The solitary hill watchers of Scotland have produced proverbial whistlers which even the poets have deigned to notice, and in the long watches of the night poor Jack has amused himself by the shrill enunciation of the "Fisher's Hornpipe."

Shakspere says: "The seaman's whistle is as a whisper in the ears of death, unheard," but this referred to Jack's efforts in a gale of wind.

Sometimes whistling supplied the place to thoughts, for Dryden says:

He trudged along, unknowing what he sought,
And whistled as he went, for want of thought.

This mode of expression has not unfrequently served to stay the courage of many a little bosom:

Whistling aloud to bear his courage up.

Or, as Dryden again has it:

Whistling to keep myself from being afraid.

A sturdy whistle well off the lungs has kept many a jobberwock from leaving the graveyard to attack the lonely passer-by.

Some names are credited with creating a whistling by their fame. Cowley speaks of the "foolish whistling of a name," and Pope exclaims:

Or, ravaged with the whistling of a name,
See Cromwell, damned to everlasting fame.

Indiscriminate and sudden whistling is used to express anything—rage, wonder or joy. The whistle, too, serves as a warning, a command or a call.

"Whistle and I'll c' ye ma lad," says the girl in the old ballad. This must have been a favorite method of attracting the attention of the fair sex, for we find in Beaumont and Fletcher's "Wit Without Money" a similar assurance.

Our school readers all contained the solemn parable of Poor Richard about paying too dear for one's whistle, and Goldsmith tells us of the man who—

For he knew when he pleased he could whistle them back.

The wetting of whistles is an entirely different thing and is not confined to men alone, for we have the evidence of Chaucer that "So was hire jolly whistle wel wette." The old proverb warns us that—

Whistling girls and crowing hens
Always come to some bad end.

FOR AND AGAINST SMOKING.

Observations by a Veteran in the Use of Tobacco.

I have had three important kinds, or grades, of experience in tobacco smoking, covering a period of about thirty years, with two considerable intervals of abstinence that were devoted to investigating the effect of nicotine upon my own system.

I may, therefore, be justified in asserting a good knowledge of the subject, because it is experimental knowledge.

I beg to offer a summary of my conclusions:

1. Human beings have probably smoked tobacco longer than history has been. The practice in China is of undoubted great antiquity, and there is reason to believe that it was common to the ancient American races.

2. It is an open question whether there is any virtue in smoking.

3. Nobody denies that it is often productive of distressing results.

4. Tobacco contains a volatile oil, a volatile alkali and an empyreumatic oil. The volatile alkali we know as nicotine. The three are dangerous.

5. The proportion of poison is smallest in the best Havana tobacco; therefore it is a wise self-defense to smoke Havana cigars.

6. The sound man may smoke with no visible ill effects.

7. If your heart be diseased abandon all use of tobacco.

8. The habitual Turkish bather may smoke with comparative impunity.

9. The smoker who discharges a great quantity of saliva impairs digestion—which means a long train of consequent afflictions.

10. The smoker who swallows his saliva as fast as it is secreted absorbs more poison than the smoker who discharges it.

11. Before relighting a partially burned cigar, the fire in which has gone out, blow through it with all the power of your lungs.

12. Tobacco smoked in a clean pipe with a long stem, or after the Turkish fashion of filtering through water, is less hurtful than cigar smoking.

13. One cigar a day is better than two or ten cigars a day.

14. No cigar is better than one cigar.

15. The smoker who defends smoking through thick and thin is first cousin to the highwayman who denounces criminal law.

16. The public good demands, particularly, the suppression of the cigarette fiend.—[Detroit Free Press.

Largest Barn in the World.

The largest barn in the world is probably that of the Union Cattle Company of Cheyenne, near Omaha. It covers five acres, cost $125,000, and accommodates 3,750 head of cattle.

APPETIZERS.

A Hard Town For Him.

A stranger who had nothing more in his looks to recommend him than a hare lip called at the Ninth Avenue Station recently and said to the sergeant in charge:

"If you'll guarantee me $10 I'll go into a trance and tell you where to find a prominent murderer."

"We don't want any murderers today," was the reply.

"Give me $5 and I'll call up the spirit of Captain Kidd, and have it point out two bank robbers."

"Couldn't do it. The bank robber market is very dull just now."

"Will you give me $3 if I tell you who stole Charley Ross?"

"No, sir."

"Will you give me a dollar to tell you just how long you are to live?"

"No."

"Don't want him."

"Two shillings?"

"No."

"Then you look out for me! If I can't get my living honestly I'll make it some other way! When the next murder occurs look for me! I'll be there! Hist!"

Later in the day he was locked up for vagrancy, and as he was locked up he confidentially remarked to the janitor:

"I'm going into a trance now. Come here with a quarter by and by and I'll give you a pointer on the end of the world. It's straight business with me, and I can give you a mile the start of everybody else. Hist! Not a word! Get your duds packed!"—[Detroit Free Press.

No Chance for the Presidency.

"Mamma," said a little Fifth Ward boy lugubriously the other day as he laid down a volume of biographical sketches of the presidents. "I don't believe I'll ever be a president. I ain't got the chance. I wasn't brung up right."

"Why, child, you have the same chance that other little boys have."

"No, I ain't; I wasn't born in a log cabin, nor I ain't drove a team on the canal, nor had to read the spellin' book by the light of a pine knot, nor had to split rails, nor nothin' like the rest of the boys who got there. I tell you, mother, I'm handicapped on this presidential business."

From the stress laid on the hardships endured by some of the presidents when boys, it is not strange that the juvenile mind should draw such a deduction.—[Elmira Gazette.

He Forgot the Combination.

A wealthy citizen of a neighboring city had been out until the small hours with convivial companions.

It was not exactly a "dry locality" that he had visited, and he arrived home slightly exhilarated.

He managed, by describing several erratic rather than geometrical lines, to get to his bedroom and into a chair. Then he called to his wife in a stage whisper:

"I can't get my boots off."

"What's the matter with your boots?"

"Nozzin," (in a faint whisper).

"What's the matter with your hands, then?" she cross-examined.

"Nozzin."

"Why don't you pull your boots off, then?"

"Maria, I've forgot the combination!"—[Boston Record.

Encouragement for Musicians.

An advertisement in a New York paper read:

"Wanted, an accordion player; apply at the shooting gallery, at No. — Third Avenue."

The object was to get all the accordion players in the city to apply to the shooting gallery, and use them as targets as fast as they entered the room.

It is greatly to be regretted that the ruse miscarried.—[Norristown Herald.

Good Hen Story.

A young married lady, who moved into the country from a city home, considered keeping hens a pleasant and profitable duty.

As she became more absorbed in the pursuit her enthusiasm increased, and "hens" made a favorite subject of her thoughts and conversation.

During one of her animated descriptions of success a friend inquired:

"Are your hens good hens?"

"Oh, yes," she replied in a delighted tone; "they haven't laid a bad egg yet."—[Catskill Mail.

Cambria Freeman.

EBENSBURG, PA.,
FRIDAY - - - MAY 20, 1887.

THE Legislature adjourns sine die to-day (Thursday).

CHICAGO has another big strike on hands—this time the builders of that city are the strikers.

MR. ANDERSON CRITCHETT, the celebrated London surgeon, was recently offered a fee of $35,000—probably the largest medical fee on record—to go to India to treat one of the native princes. After consideration the offer was declined.

THE trustees of the Ohio State University last week elected Rutherford B. Hayes to the Presidency of the University. It is sharp practice on the part of the trustees; by electing Hayes he may not accept and serve, while if they had elected somebody else he would have stole it.

THE law requiring the collection of a State tax on watches, pleasure carriages, and household furniture, has been repealed. The collection of the tax was never properly enforced as a large majority of the people evaded it in some manner, and its erasure from the statutes is right and proper.

THE sale of the French crown jewels now being sold at auction by order of the French Government, gives a chance to the millionaires of this country to spend some of their money. It is said that some of our bonanza princes have agents in attendance at the sale which began on Thursday of last week, and will continue until to morrow. A New York firm of jewelers have already made purchases amounting to over two hundred thousand dollars.

REFERRING to the anti-Poverty Society, Mayor Hewitt, of New York, said last Sunday: "I joined a society to abolish poverty 40 years ago. I said to myself, I am poor, and I will abolish my own poverty. If every man will but set about to abolish poverty in his own case it will disappear. But there are many people who do not want poverty abolished—tramps, bummers and lazy fellows who live on poverty. There is no poverty which cannot be abolished if every one would but set about it in his own case."

THE trial of Jake Sharp the millionaire railroad owner, of New York, for the bribery of the New York city aldermen in 1884, commenced in that city on Monday last. Since the trial of Boss Tweed, no criminal trial in that city has excited so much interest. Three of the bribed aldermen have been tried, convicted, and are now serving terms at Sing Sing. With all the resources of the District Attorney's office and the detective force of that great city on the one side and all the legal talent that wealth can procure on the other, the trial will be fought inch by inch and the result will be anxiously awaited.

THE New York Legislature has passed a law making Saturday a half holiday—making five and a half working days in a week instead of six, all the year round. The question with employers and employees now, is whether the employers will pay for the half day that the employees do not work. Men do not generally feel like paying for what they do not get, and it is a question if the law does not do more harm than good. When the time of labor is shortened the amount of pay is correspondingly lessened and men who would prefer to work the full six days, and get six days full pay, will be forced to be idle a half day in every week, and thus loose one twelfth of their weekly earnings.

ONE of the greatest wheat deals ever attempted, is said to be in progress at present at Chicago. According to report, 40,000,000 bushels wheat will be locked up and the price advanced as high as the manipulators can push it. During the past two weeks wheat has advanced six cents a bushel at Chicago, and the dealers are hanging breathless awaiting to see the result. It is said that the syndicate control unlimited capital and one-fourth of all the wheat in the country. The price of wheat at present is not very high, and the speculators may succeed in advancing the price, but the outlook for a large crop is a promising indication that they cannot long hold it up above its proper value. The capitalists of Chicago who use their wealth for the purpose of cornering wheat and increasing the cost of the necessaries of the poor are on a par with the Anarchists who would make war on society and pull down the habitations of the rich.

THE High License Law passed both branches of the Legislature, has been signed by the Governor, and has become a law. It fixes the license in cities of the first, second and third class at the sum of five hundred dollars; in all other cities at the sum of three hundred dollars; in boroughs at the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars and in townships at seventy five dollars, which sum shall be divided in portions, as follows: In cities of the first class, four-fifths shall be paid for the use of the city and county, and one fifth for the use of the Commonwealth; in cities of the second and third class two-fifths shall be paid for the use of the city, two-fifths for the use of the proper county, and one-fifth for the use of the Commonwealth; in all other cities or boroughs three-fifths shall be paid for the use of such city or boro', one-fifth for use of the proper county, and one-fifth for the use of the Commonwealth; in townships one-half shall be paid for the use of the township, one-fourth for the use of the proper county, and one-fourth for the use of the Commonwealth. The sums so paid for the use of the townships to be applied to keeping the roads of such townships in good repair.

JOHN SHERMAN is doing his level best to head off Blaine in his race for the next Republican nomination for the Presidency. Blaine manages to keep himself constantly before the people, by being announced as either sick or well, by a western tour or a contemplated trip to Europe, by being busy at literary work or taking things easy, by some means or other continually keeping to the annoyance of the Pinkstonian statesman from Ohio who has got the Presidential bee a buzzing badly in his bonnet. Sherman some time ago made a southern tour and started a small boomlet, but it was of premature birth, weak and sickly, and must be kept alive by the constant use of soothing syrup. In order to keep breath in his boomlet he announced last week in a letter to Lieutenant-Governor Smith, of Illinois, that he would be in Springfield, the capital of that State on the first of June next, to address the Republicans of Illinois, both in and out of the Legislature. It must be borne in mind that his letter was in response to an invitation sent him by less than half the Republican members of the Illinois Assembly, a majority of whom refused to sign the letter requesting his attendance. But Sherman must get before the people and although a majority of the Springfield Republicans do not want him, he will be there. As neither Blaine, Sherman, or any other Republican will have any show for an election, it may be well enough for the Republicans to let both Blaine and Sherman make all the noise they can.

THE Harrisburg Patriot says of the new License Law that it "provides, inter alia, that no person shall sell or give to any one on Sunday or on election days any vinous, malt or spirituous liquors, under penalty of fine and imprisonment. To describe this inhibition as infamous is to characterize it in the mildest terms.

Think of it! There shall be no wine on the table on Sunday. On that day the faint and debilitated invalid shall not be given the necessary stimulant; the sick man shall not have a drop of that elixir which may save his life; the minister shall not give the holy communion in wine. If this provision means anything it means all of these things. That it will be a dead letter goes without saying. Such a law cannot be enforced. But the iniquity of the thing is not to be excused. Because its purpose will be defeated.

The Supreme Court will no doubt in due time wipe this bluest section of the bluest of blue laws from the statute book. It is against the bill of rights, against personal liberty, against the very spirit and essence of free institutions, against common sense; it is an incentive to hypocrisy, deceit and perjury. It may have the good effect, however, of opening the eyes of the people to the wicked and dangerous interference with their rights which must follow any attempt by the Legislature to regulate their tastes and appetites as to either meat or drink.

JUSTICE WOODS of the United States Supreme Court, died at noon, at Washington, on Saturday last. He was born at Newark, Ohio, was a graduate of Yale college, and was admitted to the bar in 1847. He was a member of the Ohio Legislature in 1857, and served two terms, one of them as Speaker of the House. When the war broke out he entered the army as a Lieutenant-Colonel and came out at the close of the war as a brevet Major General. After the war he took up his residence in Alabama and in 1868 was elected Chancellor of that State, in which office he served two years, until appointed as Circuit Judge of the United States for the Fifth District. When Hayes, who had been a friend in early life, acted as President, he appointed him to the Supreme bench in 1881. His death gives President Cleveland an opportunity to appoint a Democrat to the Supreme bench which has not been done for a long time, that department of the Government being absolutely in the hands of the republicans.

It is instructive to observe how completely the troubles in regard to the Northern Pacific indemnity land grant have been removed by the utterance of a few plain and unmistakable words by the President. The counsel of that corporation are reported to be in Washington, overflowing with assurances that it will do exactly what is wanted. While "regretting the mistake of the President," the company will at once make its selection of indemnity land from unoccupied territory, and release all other lands. The only reason why it is has not done so heretofore was that Congress omitted to appropriate money to pay for the necessary surveys; but now the company will have the surveys made at its own expense. This striking example of conversion from what the company was going to do six weeks ago, will strengthen the public impression that the President made no mistake. As his declarations are the only cause of this change of heart, and as the change of heart is so complete, it is only to be regretted that the country has not had more Presidents and Cabinet officials who were ready to talk that way.

IT is reported that Bismarck has instructed the German ambassador at Paris to advise the French Government, in the interests of peace, to conduct its mobilizing experiments so as not to seem to menace the German frontier. Meantime diplomatic representations have been postponed on account of the French ministerial crisis.

MR. O'BRIEN visited Toronto, Canada, on Tuesday last, was greeted by an immense throng of people and was presented with an address. In the afternoon he made an address in the Queen's Park, but was interrupted frequently, and fears were entertained that the meeting would end in a riot. It however, passed off without any serious results.

United Ireland and Canada.

Mr. O'Brien's visit to Canada has already been justified by results. Whatever may occur as to sections of the Province of Ontario, Lower Canada has been carried with a rush for the cause of tenant rights. The French Canadian population has joined the liberal Irish element with a unanimity never before witnessed, and it is clear that Mr. O'Brien's dispatch, "Quebec solid," was not an exaggeration growing out of enthusiasm, but a concise statement of the actual condition of public sentiment in the entire Province.

The editor of United Ireland speaks of his mission with dignity and calmness. He sees force in the position of those who doubted the advisability of his visit, but says that no one who has heard his tale of Luggacurran "lacks conviction that there was the amplest and most terrible justification for our coming."

As for himself, he does not propose to be deterred from any part of the duty of his mission. He has thrown his heart over the great waters, and he will go after it to the gates of the Canadian vice-regal residence.

Thus far he has met with no violence, nor even discourtesy. So may it be to the end. And may his earnestness and eloquence so demonstrate "the absolutely unanswerable strength of the indictment" he has come to prosecute, that, instead of defense or defiance, it will be met with substantial concession, and more of such wise courtesy as Lord Lansdowne has shown by bespeaking for him a full and fair hearing in Toronto.

The Marquis of Lansdowne has a great opportunity to do a great act. The case of Lugacurran has ceased to be local. The issue has grown to be more than national. It is world wide. Like the contest of American liberty and the struggles of suffering Poland, the cause of the Irish tenants commands the adhesion of generous and humane spirts all over the world. Mr. O'Brien's petition, strike, but hear me," is one of those supremely brave appeals that bring triumph and honor to fearless advocates. Lord Lansdowne has been incited to obstinacy and persistence in the policy of repression. But he has already shown a sign of the true courage of a gentle heart, and he has a rare chance for magnanimity. Whatever he may think of his strictly legal right to withstand the appeal addressed to him, there is no doubt at all about his right to heed it. He can make all the world think better of the English landlord than has been thought for many a year. He can make every human being who hears of his just and kindly act think better of his kind. He can do more by a single word to conciliate Ireland with England, to promote the happiness of the empire he serves and the security of the crown from which he holds his fief, than any other British nobleman can do by the work of a lifetime.

Let, then Lord Lansdowne say: "I will not wage this great contest of humanity on any nice technicalities of law or constructions of agreements. I will carry out the understanding about Luggacurran, not as I might construe it, or as my representative, Mr. French, may interpret it, but as you Mr. O'Brien, and those you speak for, believe it to be, I will do this because, where my word is at stake I will go to the extreme to make my word good—beyond what in my eyes good faith demands of me. I will do it, because it is noble to yield when yielding would bring comfort and happiness to those who are weak, and if denied would think themselves aggrieved and oppressed by the strong. I will do it because it will bring more kindly feeling between those whom Providence has brought to live together—between mine and thine."

A Live Baby in an Ash Cart.

As one of the ash carts of the Street-Cleaning Department of New York, backed up to the public dump at the foot of East Twelfth street at 12.30 o'clock last Saturday night to empty the proceeds of a night's collecting tour among the garbage barrels Peter Bartow, of No. 89 Mulberry street, the the dump-keeper, noticed the handle of a basket which protruded from the load of ashes. The next minute the cart was tilted, and as its contents were shot down the slide into the scow Barrow heard a faint cry apparently emanating from the basket.

He hurried aboard of the scow and disinterring the basket from the overlying ashes, wrenched open the cover. Wrapped up in a shawl and a multiplicity of little garments a baby lay curled in the basket. It looked somewhat scared, but examination showed that it was unharmed by its singular night ride in an ash-cart. The little waif was a boy, apparently one month old. He was taken to Police Headquarters, where Matron Webb soon hushed his cries and laid him asleep in one of the cradles provided for such little strangers, though none of the thousands that have passed into her motherly care ever came through such a strange channel.

The route of the cart by which the little one arrived at the dump lies along Twelfth street, but at what point the driver picked up his unusual consignment could not be learned last night. The strangest part of the whole occurrence is that the baby's presence in the cart was not discovered until the load was emptied into the scow. It must have been sleeping when the bearer of the basket—its mother perhaps—deposited it in the barrel. Even the rude tumbling into the cart failed to arouse it, else its cries must have attracted the attention of the driver. That it could sleep undisturbed while the jolting vehicle pursued its lumbering rounds and while half-buried in the ill-smelling contents of the cart suggests the possibility of a contemplated crime. Drugged into a deep unnatural slumber, that its cries might not attract attention, the chances of its discovery were one in a thousand. If found alive the offense is merely abandonment. If not discovered until the dead body is disinterred from the smothering cargo of the scow, what then is to trace the crime of infanticide to the one who planned and executed it.

WILL NOT RALLY FOR BLAINE.—Those who went out of the Republican party when Mr. Blaine was nominated went never to return. They really had no business in the Republican party when they left it, no matter who might be its nominee. Though the personal character of Mr. Blaine was made the excuse it is a significant fact that all of these are in accord with the Democratic party upon nearly all important questions, and that the bonds which bound them to the Republican party were very loose indeed. They clung to it through habit, and because of traditional prejudice against the Democratic party. But now that they have broken these bonds it is not likely they will ever go back to a party which they have nothing whatever in common. The revolt against Blaine was really a revolt against the Republican party.—Nashville American.

The Commissioners allege, that Judge White verbally approved of the plans before the letting of the contract and thus relying upon his approval, they advertised and contracted for the work. Maggie Smith in default of the payment of sundry fines and costs imposed by the boro' of Johnstown, and Kate Sterling and Jennie Hill charged with keeping disorderly houses at the same place.

—The proprietors of Hotel Ways, Warsaw, Indiana, have offered a reward of $300 for William Verns, who robbed a safe at that hotel on the 3rd instant. The description of the man leaves no doubt that it is the same William Verns who several years ago lived in this place, and was a brakeman on the Ebensburg & Cresson branch. The description given makes him 5 feet 4 inches high; weighs 147 or 150 pounds; hair cut short; light complexion; small light brown eyes; high cheek bones; crippled hand; scar on same hand on side (outside); one finger off, perhaps two. The amount he got away with is said to be about $2,000.

—John L. Ake a former resident of Altoona, was drowned in the Mississippi river at Lacrosse, Wisconsin, on Wednesday of last week. He was a professional base ball player.

—The Greensburg Press says that short a time since Rev. J. F. Core, of New Florence, while making an excavation on his farm near that place, dug up a skeleton. After a careful examination of the skull, he says that it does not resemble either the Caucasian or the Indian, and he is of the opinion that the bones are those of one of the race of people called Mound-Builders.

—If you have not been in Altoona lately it will be worth your while when you make the next visit, to call around at the Clothing Store of Messrs McConnell & Saupp, in the St. Lawrence Block, corner of Eleventh avenue and Fourteenth street, where you will find the finest selection of Spring and Summer clothing to be found in that city which they sell at the lowest prices. Give them a call before going elsewhere.

—Mr. Philip Sanders, of Munster township, who has been ill for several months, on Friday last started to Atlantic city where he intends to remain several weeks if the sea breeze agrees with him. Mr John P. O'Neill, of Cresson, accompanied Mr. Sanders to Philadelphia, where they will be met by Dr. Devereaux of the Summit, and who will accompany Mr. Sanders to Atlantic city, and remain with him for a week. We hope he may return greatly improved by the trip.

—On Sunday night, at Philipsburg, Centre county, Maggie McCann a young woman with an unsavory reputation was arrested for killing Jacob Boyer, by shooting, near the old Philipsburg depot. Boyer was shot in the back part of the head, the ball coming out of the face near the eye. No one saw the shooting and the girl claims that he shot himself, but as she was seen with him some time previous and was the first to give the alarm her story was doubted and she was arrested and held for trial.

—McDonald at Loretto, wants 1,000 bushels of good potatoes and 5,000 pounds of good clean dry wool for which he will pay one-half cash.

—Messrs Dean & Caldwell, owners of a large and valuable coal and timber property in Cambria county, have arranged with New York and other city capitalists to organize a stock company with a capital of one million dollars. A charter will be applied for under the laws of the Commonwealth, incorporating the Frugality Coal & Coke Company, to mine and sell coal and manufacture coke in Cambria and Blair counties. George T. Bliss is treasurer of the Company. This will be a large and profitable enterprise, the concern having control of ten thousand acres, most of which is underlaid with good coal. The mines are open and about ready for operation, being located on the Cresson-Clearfield Railroad Tyrone Herald.

—Mr. Philip Jones, of Blacklick township drove into town on Sunday afternoon with his sister Mrs. Sarah Leidy, of this place. He stopped in front of Mrs. Leidy's house and just after Mrs. Leidy got out of the buggy the horse started to run off, throwing Mr. Jones out and breaking off the top of the buggy. The horse ran up high street as far as the School House where he was caught and brought back. Mr. Jones was not much hurt and took the horse and tied him to a post and was bringing back the top of the buggy to put it on again when the horse again got frightened, broke loose and ran out the Clay Pike where he was again caught and brought back. The buggy after the two runs off was pretty badly wrecked, but Mr. Jones succeeded in fixing it up so that he got home in it.

—"Little George Noel, a bright, lively 9-year-old son of John Noel, at the Ramey saw mill, in Clearfield county, was at school as usual on Monday, and on the way home in the evening about 5 o'clock was likely fishing in the mill dam, and by some means fell into the water and was drowned. Several other boys were fishing on the opposite side of the dam and many other persons were near, but no one knew the child was in the water till his hat was seen floating. Then the mill was stopped and a diligent search, instituted, which produced the lifeless body of the little boy in a short time. The dam is in sight of nearly every door about the place and the child's parents were but a short distance from where the drowning occurred. The remains of the child were buried on Tuesday at 2 o'clock." Harry Noel, of this city, was an uncle of the unfortunate boy.—Tyrone Herald.

The National Drill and Encampment at Washington.

The National Drill and Encampment, which opens in Washington May 23d, continuing until the 30th, will be one of the most interesting events that ever occurred in the history of America's militia. Its inception was the out-growth of that general desire to make the volunteer military of the several States more effective, and as a step in that direction this competitive contest was arranged, and valuable prizes of cash, medals and trophies, offered as rewards for excellence in drill. Washington was very appropriately selected as the place, the citizens responded liberally, the War Department lent its aid, and the success of the enterprise is assured beyond any possibility of doubt. Over thirty of the States and Territories will be represented by military organizations, and the daily contests, embracing all the branches of military service from the manual of arms to brigade drill, will be intensely interesting to every one. The cash prizes amount to $26,500. The camp will be pitched on the grounds surrounding the Washington Monument, and the drill ground will be marked out on the campus between the Monument and the White House.

The universal interest which will be felt in the drill in all parts of the country, and the excellent opportunity it will afford for visiting the National Capital at the most beautiful season of the year, will draw thousands to Washington. The city, noted as the most beautiful capital of the world, never appears to so good an advantage as in the first blush of spring, nor is there any pleasanter time to visit the parks, gardens, and public buildings than this. All the public property is open to the inspection of visitors.

In order to accommodate visitors the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets, May 21st to 27th, good to return until 30th, from all stations on its lines, at reduced rates. In addition special trains at special rates will be run on certain days from various sections of the Pennsylvania system, the details of which will be announced by posters and published in the newspapers.

Items from Frugality.

FRUGALITY, May 18th, 1887.

EDITOR FREEMAN—Dear sir: Having the pleasure of reading your newsy paper now and then, and not seeing any correspondence from this point, I thought it no more than right to let you hear from us.

I understand that the Company here have applied for a charter to incorporate a new company to be known as the Cresson & Clearfield Coal & Coke Co., with a cash capital of $1,000,000.

Mr. Wm. Mays (the contractor) has the schutes and trestle about completed, and in a few days will be ready to ship coal. The contractor for the coke ovens was here this week and will soon commence his work.

The company have also contracted for cutting and sawing of their large body of timber, and a number of the men are engaged in the woods, we are told that soon there will be a large store room and a great many tenant houses built. So you see Frugality is on the move.

Mr. Wm Mays was out fishing yesterday, and returned with a nice basket full of the speckled beauties.

Last evening there was a dance at the house of Mr. Shuss, and the light fantastic toe and the big clumsy foot flew around like a cyclone, every one was well treated and enjoyed themselves.

This is a great centre for Sunday visitors, and to-day there was many of the beautiful fair sex, and among the rest was the Miss Gill's, from Glen Connell.

Mr. David Dillon and Miss Annie Carlham took a pleasure trip to-day, to St. Augustine.

The deceased whose maiden name was McConnell was well known to the older residence of this place, having been born about a mile west of Ebensburg, and having resided within the limits of the county during the many years of her life. In 1844 she was married to Mr. James P. Murray who still survives her and for a number of years they resided on a farm in Jackson township, afterwards moving to this place where Mr. Murray engaged in merchandising. About twenty years ago, they removed to Tunnel hill, where they resided until about a year ago, when they removed to Loretto with Dr. Murphy, who is a relative. The deceased was a son of Hon. Daniel McLaughlin, a member of the present Legislature from this county, and was born at Tunnelhill in this county, on the 15, July 1860. He was a young man of bright promise and his death is deeply deplored by his many intimate friends. When young, he attended school at St. Francis College at Loretto, and afterwards graduated at St Vincent College near Latrobe, when about eighteen years of age. After leaving school he entered his father's law office as a student, and was admitted to practice at the bar in this county at the age of twenty-one. As an attorney he possessed a keen intellect soon acquired a large practice and was rapidly pushing himself forward to a front rank in the possession. About three years ago he was attacked by a severe cold which gradually grew on him and finally developed into consumption. For the past several months he had frequent hemorrhages, was constantly growing weaker and on Tuesday last surrounded by his relatives and friends, after receiving the last consolations of his religion, he calmly breathed his last. His funeral will take place to-day (Friday) at 9 o'clock, from St. John's Catholic church at Johnstown, after a solemn high mass.

H. A. SHOEMAKER, Clerk.

Ebensburg, May 20, 1887.

MORE PROOF.

The proof of the pudding is the eating of it and the increasing business of a merchant is a sure sign of the popularity of his goods and the fairness of his dealings.

Nothwithstanding the wiley schemes of many of our would-be competitors we are daily growing and multiplying. Our trade, so far this season, is away ahead of all previous years and our prospects for the future still brightening.

Let us again assure our Ebensburg friends that their trade is ever appreciated and solicited entirely in a question of the best goods for the least money.

We are still the same Reliable One Price Clothing House and defy any other to undersell us or supply the same quality, make or fit of goods that we command in Johnstown.

In your purchases consult both quality and price and when comparing our goods with those of others, examine critically the get-up, the finish, the make, the fit and the lasting qualities of both. Remember orders by mail will receive prompt and careful attention.

PRETTY BIG FARMING.—That the ther of his country was quite an exnsive agriculturalist is shown by the llowing statement in and almanac pub shed in 1790: Gen. Washington posses s 10,000 acres of land in a body where he lives; constantly employs 250 hands; keeps 24 ploughs going all the year when the weather will permit; sowed in 1797, 600 bushels of oats, 700 acres of wheat, and prepared as much corn, barey, potatoes, beans, peas, etc.; has near 0 acres in grass and sowed 150 with rnips.

Stock, 140 horses, 112 cows, 235 working oxen, heifers and steers, and 500 sheep. The lands about his seat are all laid down in grass; the farms are scattered around at the distance of two, three, four or five miles, which the Genal visits every day, unless the weather absolutely stormy. He is constantly making various and extensive expeiments for the improvement of agriculure. He is stimulated with the desire which always actuates him to do good to mankind. In 1786 he killed 150 hogs, weighing 18,500 pounds, for his family use (exclusive of provision for his negroes) which was made in bacon.

A Word With Young Men.

It is as easy to be a rich man as a poor one. Half the energy displayed in keeping ahead that is required to catch p when behind would save credit, give more time to attend to business, and add to the profit and reputation of those who work for gain. Honor your engagements. If you promise to meet a man or to do a certain thing at a certain moment, be ready at the appointed time. Be prompt keep your word. If you go out on business, attend promptly to the matter on hand, then as promptly go bout your own business.

Do not stop to tell stories in business ours. If you have a place of business, e found there when wanted. No man n get rich by sitting around stores and loons. Never "fool" on business matrs. Have order, system, regularity, erality, promptness. Do not meddle h business you know nothing of. ver buy an article you do not need, ply because it is cheap and the man ho sells it will take it out in trade. rade is money. Strive to avoid words nd personalities. Do not kick every tone in the path; more miles can be ade in a day, by going steadily on han by stopping to kick. Pay as you o.

A man of honor respects his word as e does his bond. Aid, but never beg. elp others when you can, but never ive what you cannot afford to, simply ecause it is fashionable. Learn to say no." No necessity for snapping it out g fashion, but say it firmly and resetfully. Have but few confidants, d the fewer the better. Use your wn brains, rather than those of others. earn to think and act for yourself. e vigilant. keep ahead rather than ehind time.

Young men cut this out, and if there be folly in the argument, let us know.

Farm Notes.

Dry, clean wood ashes are worth more than 25 cents a bushel to any farmer who wants manure. You can scarcely use them on any crop without very sensible results. A handful thrown around the corn plants at the first hoeing will greatly increase their growth, and give them a highly dark green color; scattered in the hill before the potato is covered, or about the hill just before hoeing, will have similar results; sown broadcast on the mowing fields at the rate of; at as small an amount as five bushels to the acre will greatly increase the growth and color of the crop. Besides this their beneficial results will continue for several years in succession. Strewed over young cabbage plants, squashes, melons, or any of the garden vegetables, such as tomatoes, beets, onions, turnips or carrots, wood ashes not only tend to disturb the insects that infests the plants, but have a decided influence on their growth and quality. All the ashes made on the farm should be collected with care, kept dry and applied to the crops. Nothing could be better for the young orchard. Spreading ashes broadcast over the surface would be more useful than any other kind of manure. The roots will find it if spread. It is better to use a moderate quantity annually than to apply a large amount at one time.

A feir estimate will certainly make twenty miles a day the average of a farmer's walking. Up about daybreak, the farmer goes to the barn, fodders his cattle and spends an hour moving to and fro and returns for breakfast, having walked at least three miles before this duty is performed. If he goes to the field and plows until noon and gets over half an acre with a 7 inch furrow on a 10 acre field he covers ten miles; then walks home half a mile to the barn, then to the house, making in all near or quite eleven miles; repeating this in the afternoon, and foddering and doing up chores until sundown, he completes twenty-five to thirty miles in a full day's work.

An intelligent physician says: "It is a good rule always to ride up in an elevator, and when coming down to take the stairs. Like going up hill, walking up stairs is hard work, and sometimes risky, especially for people with weak lungs, defective respiratory organs, or heart disease. But going down stairs hurts nobody, but is good exercise; going down on a brisk run is really a good thing it shakes up the anatomy, without incurring the danger of physical over exertion. This shaking up is good for one's internal mechanism, which it accelerates, especially the liver, the kidneys, and the blood circulation."

THE AMERICAN WIFE.—There is no married woman so completely one with her husband, as a well married American woman. The English husband is masterful and his wife is regarded as his inferior in every way. He must be appealed to on every question, from dress to servants. A Frenchman expects his wife to live on nothing comparatively, and her dress money must be saved out of the household expenses, or earned in some way. The American husband makes his wife his equal. Her interests are his; his interests are hers. She knows his business and whether they can have $1,200 or $3,000 a year to spend. She keeps track of the market, the crops, the strikes and clear conception of evrey general and personal matter that comes under her inspection. An English woman knows nothing of her husband's business matters; not any more than does his business clerk know what goes on in his master's house. The wife never knows if her husband is making a fortune or is on the brink of bankruptcy. She is given so much for household expenses, and she feels no surprise if at the end of a year they move into larger and more commodious quarters. If she is told to pack up and be ready to leave she asks no questions but moves with the furniture.

A NEIGHBORLY BOY.—He was a bright, talkative boy of eight or nine years, and he rang the door bell of a house on Bush street the other day and asked to see the lady of the house. He was admitted, and when she came into the parlor he said: "I belong to the family who just moved in next door." "Yes." "We want to be neighborly. Are you coming to call on ma?" "Why—why, my child, I don't know." "You'd better come. Then she can come over to see you. She's a great woman to talk, and she'll show you the place where she had a fellon on her hand. You want to be neighborly, don't you?" I—I suppose so." "Well, then, I'll borrow a hunk of butter, and you come over and borrow our clothes-bars, and we'll soon be acquainted. We ain't a bit stuck up, even if we have got a mantel in the parlor. Well, good-bye."

SOME of the cures for swine plague published are decidedly amusing. Not a few probably belong to the dark ages. We most often find these recipes in the miscalled agricultural department of the political weekly; but the editor of the Southern Cultivator allows a correspondent to perpetrate the following in the April number of that excellent paper: "Took a pint of strong red pepper tea; let it cool; put it into a quart bottle, then put in common salt until it would dissolve no more; turned the pig on its back, inserted a stick larger than the neck of the bottle, and drenched him with the mixture. The pig was well in five days." O wonderful germicide! Cable the news to Koch and Pasteur! But if the mixture had been administered boiling hot, would it not have killed the microbes sooner?

Grape Juice for Sickness.

The art of cultivating the Oporto vines and frementing the Oporto Grape into wine in this country, and of preserving the Grape Juice fresh without frementation has been brought to a greater degree of perfection by Mr. Alfred Speer of Passaic, N. J., than by any other person; in fact, he was the pioneer in introducing and advertising Native Wines. He has purchased hundreds of tons of grapes, besides his own vintage. Mr. Speer's success has arisen from the strict purity and valuable properties of his wines for invalids and feeble persons, and his reputation extends around the world.

A STARTLING FACT.

It is not commonly known that a large proportion of the rheumatism and neuralgia extant is traceable directly to the diseased condition or imperfect action of the kidneys and liver; therefore a remedy which cures the resulting disease must have found and smitten the first cause. Many persons using Athlophoros for rheumatism and neuralgia have been surprised to find that chronic disorders of the liver and kidneys have also been greatly relieved and they have written for an explanation. The fact is, that the remedy acts directly on these organs, cleansing them from all irritating substances and regulating their action. Taken in connection with Athlophoros Pills this is, without exception, the most valuable kidney and liver remedy in the world, and will cure a large proportion of those who have these diseases.

Copake Iron Works, Copake, N. Y.

For the last five years I have been subject to severe attacks of rheumatism which would cause me the most excruciating pain in my chest; was obliged to put myself under the doctor's care for two or three months at a time, and even then it was almost impossible to get any relief. The last time I was taken my son was at home, and I requested him to call the doctor, but he said he had heard of a new remedy for rheumatism called Athlophoros and advised me to try it. I did and you can imagine my surprise, was relieved of all pain after taking one bottle and have not been troubled since. It saved me quite a sum of money, and what is better, I was not obliged to endure weeks of suffering; would not be without it in the house. Have recommended it to others and it never fails to give relief.

L. H. PATTERSON.

Every druggist should keep Athlophoros and Athlophoros Pills, but where they cannot be bought of the druggist the Athlophoros Co., 112 Wall St., New York, will send either (carriage paid) on receipt of regular price, which is $1.00 per bottle for Athlophoros and 50c. for Pills.

The Rise and Fall of the Bustle.

The popularity of the bustle as an article of female adornment is hard to account for, says a writer. Some ten years ago it reached a high state of development, and then discarded for a time; but lately it has come again in vogue, and this Fall has touched highwater mark, both in size and popularity. It is strange taste that stimulates the physical development that the bustle indicates, and it would no doubt, be impossible to trace its origin; and propably not one in ten thousand who wears it cares to know, so long as it is in the fashion.

In looking at a well bustled woman, one is led to believe that the intention of the addition to her figure was to imitate the graceful outline of the quail, or a modified form of the peacock. It looks handsome enough when the annex is skillfully constructed and gracefully worn, but uninitiated cannot but sympathize with the wearer in the great responsibility which she assumes, and in the constant fear that must haunt her that something may go wrong with this elaborately built up portion of her anatomy; but such considerations do not daunt a woman. She gets and wears what the fashion dictates and takes all risks. There is a movement on foot, however, which may cause the downfall of the bustle. In European capitals fashionable dogs are beginning to be adorned with them as far as the exegencies of the canine anatomy will admit. The fashion of course, will spread, and it is likely that when it begins to become general, women will resume their natural shape and leave the bustle entirely to the dog.

THE ENGLISH SPARROW.—The forthcoming report of the Department of Agriculture on the English sparrow will be a very interesting document. It will contain about 400 printed pages in which will appear the experience of about 3,200 people with this destructive little rascal. It is doubtful if there in another bird in the world so unanimously condemned as a nuisance as this alien. Dr. Merrian the ornithologist of the Department, who has charge of the preparation of the report, says that the indictment against the sparrow is a terrible one. He has scarcely a friend in the whole country. In California he is hated as cordially as the Chinese; but while it is admitted that the Mongolian may be made a useful citizen, there is not even a monopolistic employer of coolie labor who can see the slightest use in the sparrow. He is accused of doing frightful damage to the vinyards of the Pacific slope. He always selects the most luscious bunches of grapes, and he invariably sticks his bill into the very best berries on the bunch. Farmers who devote their time to the cultivation of grain, report that the sparrows, wherever they are thick, do frightful damage to cereals. Market gardeners and the raisers of small fruits, in the vicinity of cities, say that since the sparrow began to multiply the profits of market gardening have almost vanished. The only known use for the pest is as a substitute for reed birds. One man in Albany, New York, reports that he sells hundreds of dozens of sparrows every month to the restaurants in that city where they were served up to the New York Legislators as the toothsome little thief of the Southwestern rice fields. Sparrows make excellent table birds and it is thought that the only effectual method of curtailing their increase will be to induce the small boys to catch them for food purposes.

PLAIN TRUTH.—We notice a growing tendency among young men of a certain class to speak lightly of women whenever opportunity offers. Ofttimes you will hear the slighting remark, or sly inuendo from the lips of some unthinking person standing on a street corner. We have often wondered how these young men would feel were they to overhear such filthy and, many times, obscene remarks about their own mothers and sisters. No doubt they would bring the offender instant chastisement, but who will bring the detractors of women, who have no brothers or friends to protect them, to account? When defenceless women, ladies in fact, are thus made the target for obscene slang by young men who desire to be known as gentlemen, it is high time they are rebuked in fitting terms of condemnation. To drop a word which reflects upon the good name and character of a man, may result in the loss of his position in business or ruin his credit, but these he can recover again; but to a woman her reputation is her all. An inuendo or sly insinuation may blast her character, debar her from society and ruin her prospects for her lifetime. It is cruel and contemptible in the highest degrees to trifle with the good name of a woman, and no young man who is worthy of a mother or the sacred name of a sister, and in whose heart lurks the least spark of honor or manhood, will be guilty of doing so. It is only a poltroon, a miserable, contemptible coward who will stoop so low in the moral scale.

It is recommended to steep dried clover in hot water till swollen and soft and then feed it to the fowls in winter, as they require green food, and this is the best substitute for grass. The clover, should first be passed through a hay cutter and cut into short lengths before steeping.

A Vermont farmer plants a sunflower seed instead of a pole to each hill of beans. The sturdy stalk answers for a pole, and the seeds supply an excellent food for poultry.

A teaspoonful of spirits of turpentine in a quart of cornmeal is said to be one of the best remedies for gapes when fed to young chickens.

In London, a short time ago, a lady paid sixty dollars for a single pair of stockings.

Chills and Fever. Malaria.

"Many cases of fever and ague, dumb ague and congestive chills were promptly arrested and entirely banished by the use of Simmons Liver Regulator. You don't say half enough in regard to the efficacy of this valuable medicine in cases of ague, intermittent fevers, etc. Every case has been arrested immediately. I was a sufferer for years with the liver disease, and only found relief by using the Regulator."—ROBERT J. WEEKS, Batavia, Kane Co., Ill.

MALARIA.

"If people could only know what a splendid medicine Simmons Liver Regulator is there would be many a physician without a patient, and many an interminable doctor bill saved. I consider it infallible in malarial infection. I had for many years been a perfect physical wreck from a combination of complaints, all the outgrowth of malaria in my system, and even under the skillful hand of Dr. J. P. Jones, of this city, I had despaired of ever being a well woman again. Simmons Liver Regulator was recommended to me. I tried it; it helped me, and it is the only thing that ever did me any good. I persevered in its use, and I am now in perfect health. I know the medicine cured me, and I always keep it as a reliable 'standby' in my family." Resp'y,

Marrying Money.

When a young man marries an heiress the changes in his outward condition are subtle, but none the less interesting. Very soon—miraculously soon indeed—he becomes a little stouter, and his walk is slower, his feet being planted more solidly and more carefully than they were when they carried a bachelor. His clothes turn darker by one shade at least, and his watch-chain is certainly a thought heavier. The handle of the umbrella, also, has become perceptibly bigger, whereas his scarf-pins are undoubtedly more quiet in character—less fantastic or trivial. Observe him on his way to a church wedding, for example, and mark how different is his mode of progression from that of an unattached and miscellaneous youth. The rogue knows that an odd seat will be reserved for him near the head of the aisle, and that he has no occasion for hurry. When he drives out, it is in a substantial dog-cart or mail phaeton, and he eschews—not, perhaps, altogether without regret—the sidebar buggy which he used to think the kind of vehicle that he would have if he were rich. He is now a substantial person in the community—a family man, a capitalist by proxy—and he begins to have serious views on political matters, which he is desirous of discussing with older men. In fact, he is rather given to shunning his contemporaries, and is not altogether easy in the society of his former companions. He has deserted their ranks, and although he has gained in dignity he has lost in freedom. His chains are golden, to be sure, but they bind with the force of a less costly metal. No longer for him are the delights of a midnight cigar or refreshing brandy and soda at the club. He is now the victim of times and seasons, and must go discreetly home when the proper hour arrives.

Working on the Highways.

In many sections of the East, there is a growing dissatisfaction with the old method of working on roads, i. e., where each resident along a certain "beat," or road section, works out his assessed time thereon. The general result of such labor is poor roads. People nowadays want something better than is furnished by the old road system, and the advent of improved road working implements shows that better roads are easily obtainable.

The prevailing arguments against the contract system are that persons not owning real estate or personal property are, of course, exempt from taxation, and consequently from road working; under the old system they are assessed one day at least, and must work or commute. And taxpayers, already burdened, it may be, object to the payment in cash for labor which they can preform themselves without great inconvenience. Here the objection to the old system may be mentioned, viz.: that labor on the highway is one thing, on the farm another. Everyone knows that, as a rule, the day's work on the road is "cut short at both ends;" that boy's labor often counts as man's labor; that the roads are worked once in the spring for all the year, and at a time when such work may not be most needed; that the day is often nothing more nor less than a holiday. If perfect roads are the desideratum, the old system fails to furnish them, or only in exceptional cases. The contract system is more expensive until the road beds are once put in good order, then less money need be expended upon them. And yet, if a man values his time and labor at the low price of one dollar per day, the expense objection is largely overcome. Where the contract system is adoped and once fairly tried it is not often rejected.—American Agriculturist.

GREAT GENIUS IN THE BUD.—A little incident never before related of Tom Edison that happened in the early days of his childhood, at Milan, shows how early the inventive genius of his brain began to bud. It was on a snapping cold day in January that Mrs. Edison caught Tom sliding down the outside cellar door. She ran out with motherly care and led him by the ear indoors. "Haven't I told you often enough, Tom Edison, not to wear out your pants in that way?" she said; "and on such a day as this, too!" Tom moped about a little, and hung around the kitchen until his mother left to work elsewhere in the house. When she had gone he seized a big pan, half filled it with water, and, taking a long breath, suddenly sat down plumb in it. Then he jumped up, ran out of doors, and in two or three minutes the seat of his trousers was frozen stiff. He made for the cellar door and had slid down in high glee half a dozen of times, when he caught sight of his mother coming for him. "It's all right, ma; it's all right he yelled; "I ain't slidin' on my pants. I've got 'em frozen stiff and covered with ice, and they ain't rubbin' a bit."

FOR CRAMPS.—A lady correspondent of Health and Home writes: Take a piece of unbleached cotton cloth that has never been wet, heat it well by the fire, and wrap it close around the limb or part affected, and in a very short time the cramp will cease and will not return as long as the cloth remains.

To wear a piece of cotton wick constantly around the ankle, will prevent cramps in the feet. The other night I forgot to replace the cotton, and before morning was obliged to call for help, and by replacing the wick was soon perfectly relieved. Such a simple remedy is within the reach of all, and I have never known a single failure through many years of practice.

Diphtheria.

"I am living in a neighborhood surrounded with Diphtheria and was attacked with Ulcerated Sore Throat. I at once commenced to use Darbys Prophylactic Fluid, diluted about one half, as a gargle, when great clots of hard membrane and mucous came from my throat, and the attack passed off. I am satisfied of its efficacy as a preventive and cure for Diphtheria."—W. P. WOODWARD, Frankford, Pa.

"DOES your mother wear a switch?" asked an inquisitive lady. "Yes," replied little Johnny, "but she always uses her slipper."
